

JULIA MANN

julboltmann@gmail.com

(+1) 443-841-4880

(+972) 58-4443841

Julia is an alumna of The New School's Documentary Media Studies graduate program. She currently works as the Program Coordinator at Docaviv - The Tel Aviv International Documentary Film Festival, as well as the Development and Research Coordinator for Close Up, a documentary training program for filmmakers from the Middle East and North Africa. She previously worked in New York for several productions, including Saving Capitalism (Netflix Original) and Chasing Childhood (DOC NYC 2020). She received her bachelor's degree from Tel Aviv University in Digital Culture and Communication. Julia has participated in additional courses and workshops at New York Film Academy, Maine Media Workshops + College, and the Jerusalem Film Workshop.

Julia aims to explore every aspect of the documentary film industry; she is not position- or title-driven, but rather driven by the mission of a film or film-related company. For the past six years, she has lived in America and Israel, always pulled back and forth between the two. When she is not watching or making documentaries, Julia can be found dabbling in pottery or asking people on the street if she can pet their dog.