

ZEYNEP KASERCI

Zeynep is a documentary filmmaker and researcher based in London. For the past two years, she has been working as a producer in the media industry.

Born in Izmir, Turkey, she moved to Scotland to pursue her undergraduate degree in art history and social anthropology at the University of St Andrews and completed her MA in visual anthropology at the University of Manchester.

She has done extensive anthropological research on subject formation processes and experiences of gender in north-eastern Turkey, and her ethnographic film Ocak was screened at numerous international film festivals.

She is currently a participant at the Creative Europe: The Caravan Residency Programme and a recipient of the One World Media fellowship grant. She is part of the international creative collective Mesh, organizing participatory workshops on critical collaboration.