

Zhuoxuan Liu is a filmmaker based in London, working across film and digital media. A recent graduate from the London Film School, his practice focuses on how sound and image come together to shape tone, rhythm, and audience experience, whether in narrative work or short-form content. Alongside his own projects, he has experience across various art forms such as photography, graphic design and sound art, developing a flexible approach to content-making that moves between storytelling, technical craft, and audience engagement.
